Success Stories

A prominent television host sought personal income disability protection. Hanleigh secured a three-year policy providing monthly benefits of $100,000 for the first 12 months, followed by a $22 million lump sum in the event of a career-ending disability.

A country music icon sought personal income protection to address both temporary income needs and the risk of a permanent, career-ending disability. Hanleigh secured two three-year policies: the first provided $75,000 per month in income replacement for up to 36 months, while the second offered a $15 million lump sum to safeguard the star's future earning potential.
